Ever since the Boston Red Sox won the world's championship, Boston seems to have taken on a new lease of life. Now it has won the terminus of another trans-Atlantic steamship line. New York's batting average in this department is rather weakened.

Coal operators advise consumers not to make large purchases of coal and thus create a shortage. The operators may rest assured, the consumer will not buy more than is necessary at the present price. The supposed uneasiness of the former on that point is not well

It will be some time before Great Britain sends another ambassador the equal of Jame Bryce to Washington, because Great Britain has few men so well fitted for the position. The United States sincerely regrets that Ambassador Bryce has resigned, particularly at this time, when there are several important treaty matters to be taken up by the itwo countries.

The sad accident on Washington street yesterday afternoon seems more of a pity because the height of the automobiling season had passed without a serilous accident being recorded in Barre. However, the season had not passed without grave apprehension on the part of the general public because of the seeming carelessness of some automobile drivers, especially at intersections of streets, like the corner of Main, Elm and Washington streets.

THE GRAND TRUNK'S ACTION. The most disastrous wreck of recent years is the collision between the Grand Trunk and the Boston & Maine, which resulted in the cessation of work by the former on the proposed extension to the Atlantic coast. The result is something which is greatly regretted through a large section of New England; and the condemnation is the greater around Providence, where large expectations were raised over the proposed coming of the Grand Trunk. Whatever the causes underlying the change of tactics, it is likely that all New England eventually will be the loser if the proposed extension is not completed, as this through line of the Grand Trunk offered added strength to the resistance to domina tion of New England by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad sys-
